

Autistic people and people with ADHD who use services have advised us that their needs are often better or more easily understood by other neurodivergent people and that they would relate much better to staff that are neurodivergent. There is an opportunity for provider(s) to grow and develop an expert workforce, achieve greater cost effectiveness and offer support to a greater number of people through employing both neurodivergent and neurotypical people across a diverse range of roles in the delivery of the whole pathway.

There should be no transport implications as existing infrastructure will be utilised and where people require in person support this will be made available within Medway.

11. Is there any other information you feel the Committee should consider?

None currently.

12. Please state whether or not you consider this proposal to be substantial, thereby generating a statutory requirement to consult with Overview and Scrutiny

We do not feel this is a substantial change in provision to the current services commissioned for autistic people and those with ADHD living in Medway. It does not remove access to services and will enhance the offer of support to people at a self-management and community level, so they have direct access to services rather than having to go via specialist services to gain access to support.

The bringing together of existing provision with additional community support and intensive support will improve the patient flow through these services and enable those with the greatest need and higher levels of risk to be seen and supported by the specialist services in a timelier manner.

Further opportunities for greater integration between health and social care exist for this population and this is an area of development which will be progressed through the Learning Disability and Autism Delivery Partnership Board and other joint commissioning and operational delivery groups.
